

ABSTRACT

A digital transmission line tap circuit is provided for applying a non-intrusive tap on a digital transmission line thus allowing the transmission signal to be monitored or utilized by another piece of transmission equipment. The tap circuit incorporates all the required functions of the tap in one circuit and eliminates large components, such as termination transformers.